ABSTRACT

Credit card frauds are easy and friendly targets. E-commerce and many other online sites have increased the online payment modes, increasing the risk for online frauds. Increase in fraud rates, researchers started using different machine learning methods to detect and analyse frauds in online transactions. The main aim of the paper is to design and develop a novel fraud detection method for Streaming Transaction Data, with an objective, to analyse the past transaction details of the customers and extract the behavioural patterns. Where cardholders are clustered into different groups based on their transaction amount. Then using sliding window strategy [1], to aggregate the transaction made by the cardholders from different groups so that the behavioural pattern of the groups can be extracted respectively. Later different classifiers [3],[5],[6],[8] are trained over the groups separately. And then the classifier with better rating score can be chosen to be one of the best methods to predict frauds. Thus, followed by a feedback mechanism to solve the problem of concept drift [1]. In this paper, we worked with European credit card fraud dataset.

It is vital that credit card companies are able to identify fraudulent credit card transactions so that customers are not charged for items that they did not purchase. Such problems can be tackled with Data Science and its importance, along with Machine Learning, cannot be overstated. This project intends to illustrate the modelling of a data set using machine learning with Credit Card Fraud Detection. The Credit Card Fraud Detection Problem includes modelling past credit card transactions with the data of the ones that turned out to be fraud. This model is then used to recognize whether a new transaction is fraudulent or not. Our objective here is to detect 100% of the fraudulent transactions while minimizing the incorrect fraud classifications. Credit Card Fraud Detection is a typical sample of classification. In this process, we have focused on analysing and pre-processing data sets as well as the deployment of multiple anomaly detection algorithms such as Local Outlier Factor and Isolation Forest algorithm on the PCA transformed Credit Card Transaction data.

Python is an incredibly popular programming language for data science due to its simplicity, versatility, and the availability of powerful libraries and tools tailored for data analysis, manipulation, and visualization. Here are some essential Python topics specifically relevant to data science that we learnt in our internship:

✓ NumPy and Pandas:

NumPy is a fundamental package for scientific computing with Python, providing support for arrays, matrices, and a large collection of mathematical functions to operate on these data structures. Pandas, on the other hand, is a powerful library for data manipulation and analysis. It provides data structures like Series and DataFrame, which are essential for handling structured data effectively.

✓ Data Visualization with Matplotlib and Seaborn:

Matplotlib is a widely used plotting library for creating static, interactive, and animated visualizations in Python. Seaborn is a statistical data visualization library based on Matplotlib that provides a high-level interface for creating attractive and informative statistical graphics.

1.2 IMPORTANCE AND APPLICATIONS OF PYTHON

Python is important for several reasons, here are few reasons why python is important:

1. Readability: Python's clean and easy-to-understand syntax makes it a great language for beginners and promotes code readability, which leads to better collaboration and maintainability.

1.3 CREDIT CARD FRAUD DETECTION

Credit card generally refers to a card that is assigned to the customer (cardholder), usually allowing them to purchase goods and services within credit limit or withdraw cash in advance. Credit card provides the cardholder an advantage of the time, i.e., it provides time for their customers to repay later in a prescribed time, by carrying it to the next billing cycle. Credit card frauds are easy targets. Without any risks, a significant amount can be withdrawn without the owner's knowledge, in a short period. Fraudsters always try to make every fraudulent transaction legitimate, which makes fraud detection very challenging and difficult task to detect. In 2017, there were 1,579 data breaches and nearly 179 million records among which Credit card frauds were the most common form with 133,015 reports, then employment or tax-related frauds with 82,051 reports, phone frauds with 55,045 reports followed by bank frauds with 50,517 reports from the statics released by FTC [10].

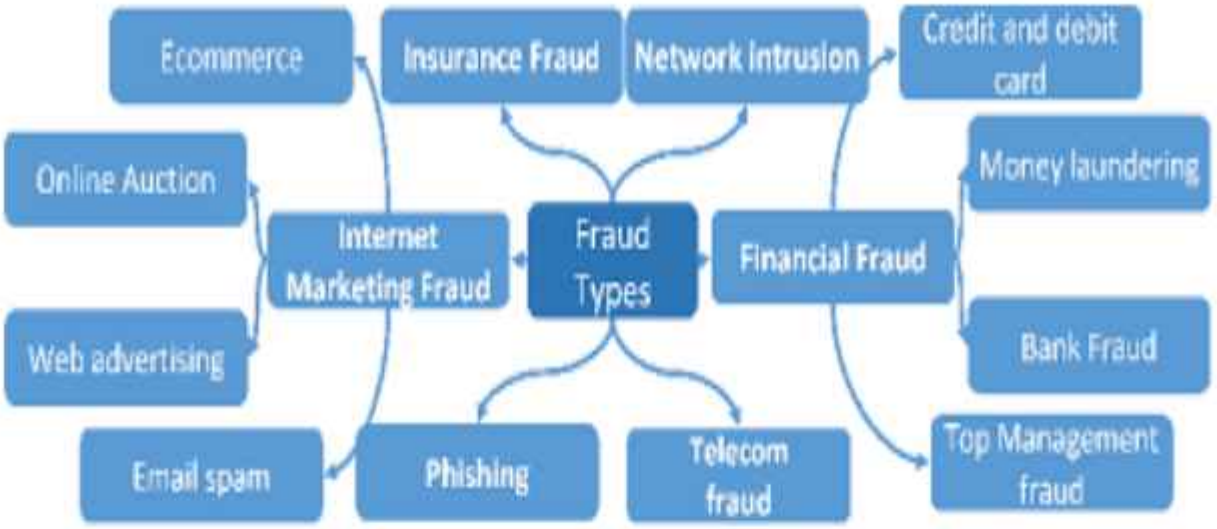

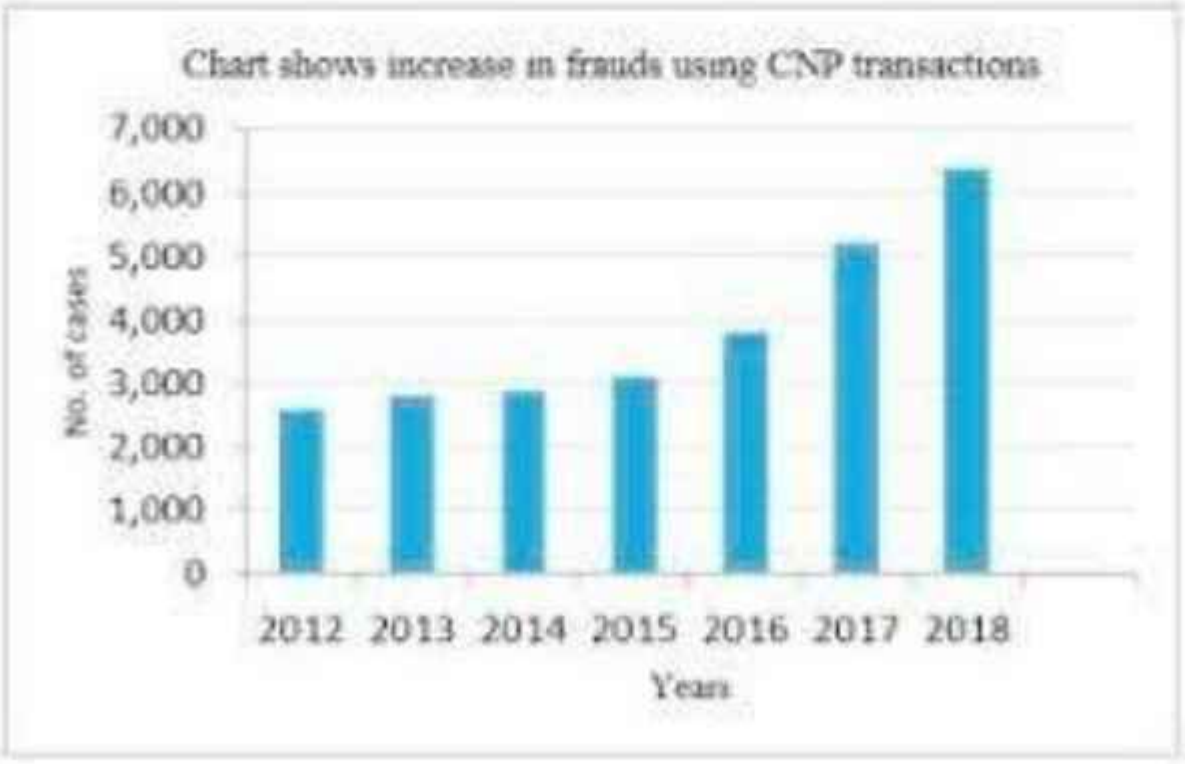

Fig 1.3.1. Overall Architecture

With different frauds mostly credit card frauds, often in the news for the past few years, frauds are in the top of mind for most the world's population. Credit card dataset is highly imbalanced becausethere will be more legitimate transaction when compared with a fraudulent one. As advancement, banks are moving to EMV cards, which are smart cards that store their data on integrated circuits rather than on magnetic stripes, have made some on-card payments safer, but still leaving card-not- present frauds on higher rates. According to 2017 [10], the US Payments Forum report, criminals have shifted their focus on activities related to CNP transactions as the security of chip cards were increased. Fig 2, shows the number of CNP frauds cases that were registered in respective years.

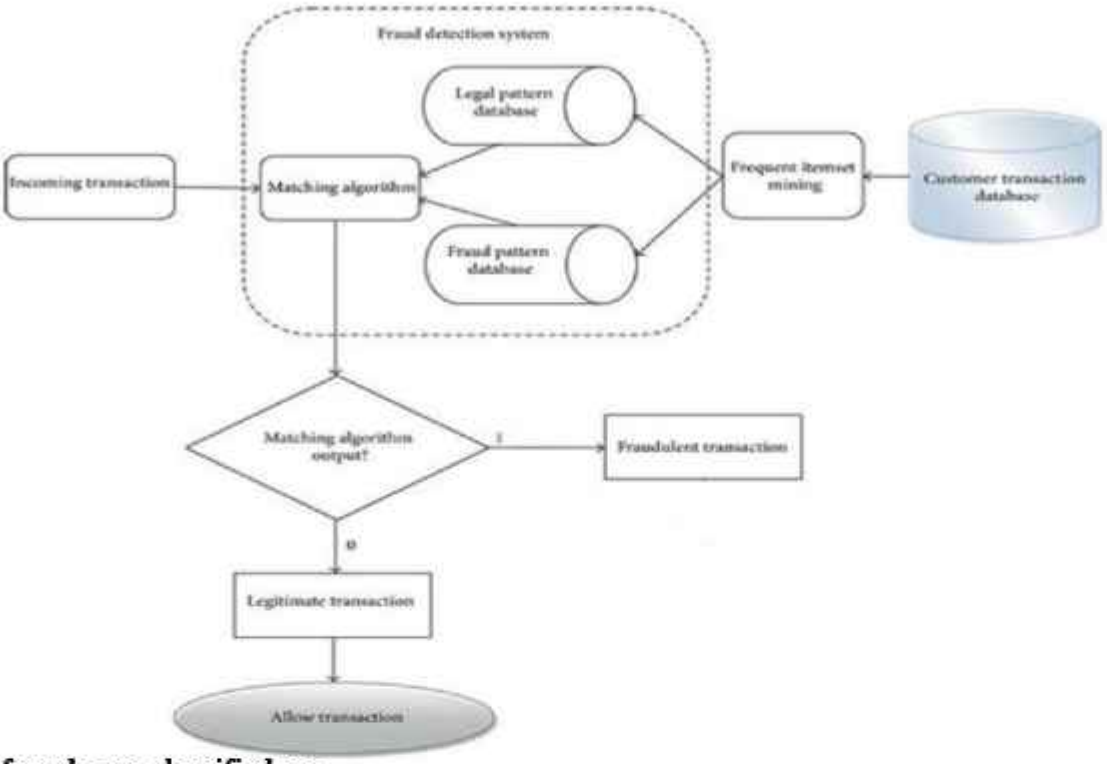

Even then there are chances for thieves to misuse the credit cards. There are many machine learning techniques to overcome this problem.

Fraud' in credit card transactions is unauthorized and unwanted usage of an account by someone other than the owner of that account. Necessary prevention measures can be taken to stop this abuse and the behaviour of such fraudulent practices can be studied to minimize it and protect against similar occurrences in the future.In other words, Credit Card Fraud can be defined as a case where a person uses someone card issuing authorities are unaware of the fact that the card is being used. Fraud detection involves monitoring the activities of populations of users in order to estimate, perceive or avoid objectionable behaviour, which consist of fraud, intrusion, and defaulting. This is a very relevant problem that demands the attention of communities such as machine learning and data science where the solution to this problem can be automated. This problem is particularly challenging from the perspective.

of learning, as it is characterized by various factors such as class imbalance. The number of valid transactions far outnumber fraudulent ones. Also, the transaction patterns often change their statistical properties over the course of time.

These are not the only challenges in the implementation of a real-world fraud detection system, however. In real world examples, the massive stream of payment requests is quickly scanned by automatic tools that determine which transactions to authorize. Machine learning algorithms are employed to analyse all the authorized transactions and report the suspicious ones. These reports are investigated by professionals who contact the cardholders to confirm if the transaction was genuine or fraudulent. The investigators provide feedback to the automated system.

which is used to train and update the algorithm to eventually improve the fraud-detection performance over time. Else's credit card for personal reasons while the owner and the Fraud detection methods are continuously developed to defend criminals in adapting to their fraudulent strategies.

These frauds are classified as:

1. credit card frauds; online and offline
2. card theft
3. account bankruptcy
4. divide intrusion
5. application fraud
6. counterfeit card
7. telecommunication fraud

Some of the currently used approaches to detection of such fraud are:

1. Artificial neural network
2. Fuzzy logic
3. genetic algorithm
4. logistic regression
5. Decision tree
6. support vector missions
7. K-Nearest neighbour

1.4 METHODOLOGY

The approach that this paper proposes, uses the latest machine learning algorithms to detect anomalous activities, called outliers. The basic rough architecture diagram can be represented with the following figure:

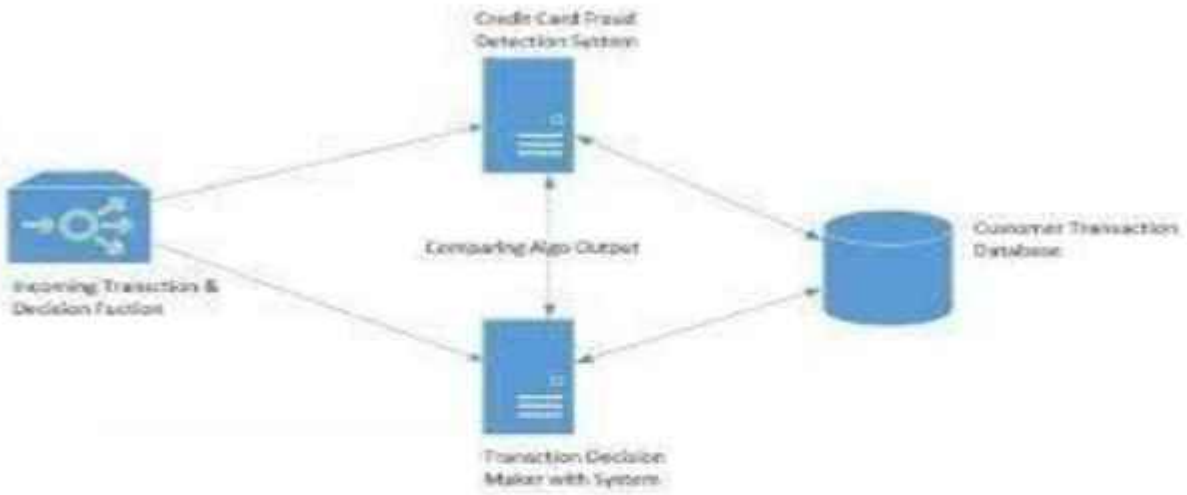

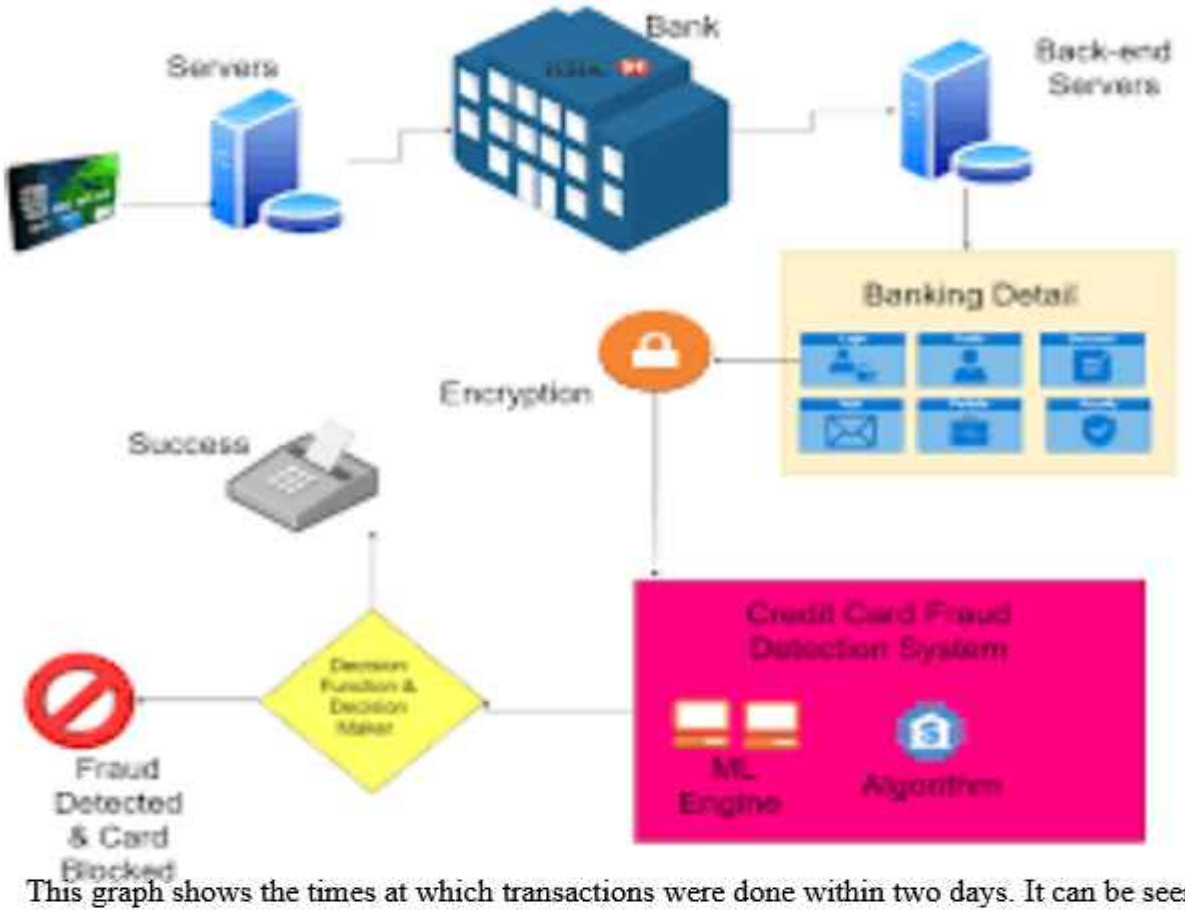

Fig 1.4.1. Methodology

When looked at in detail on a larger scale along with real life elements, the full architecture diagram can be represented as follows:

This graph shows the times at which transactions were done within two days. It can be seen that theleast number of transactions were made during nighttime and highest during the days.

This graph represents the amount that was transacted. Most transactions are relatively small and only a handful of them come close to the maximum transacted amount.

After checking this dataset, we plot a histogram for every column. This is done to get a graphical representation of the dataset which can be used to verify that there are no missing.

any values in the dataset. This is done to ensure that we don't require any missing value imputation and the machine learning algorithms can process the dataset smoothly.

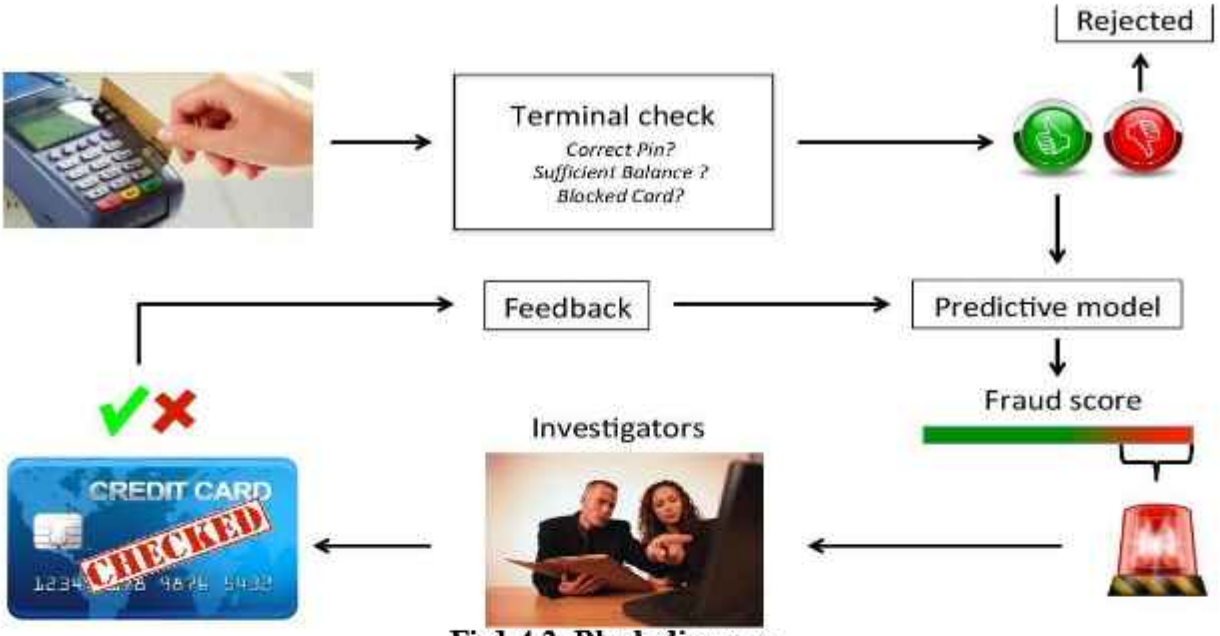

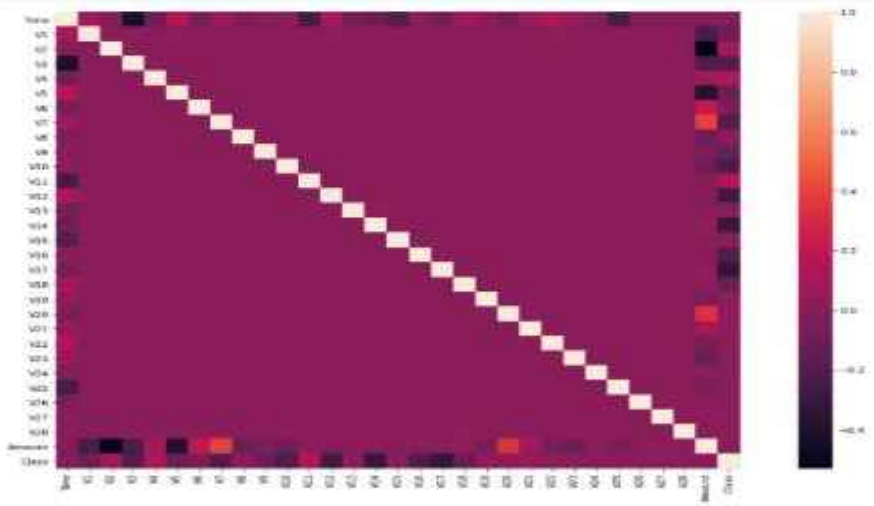

Fig1.4.3. Block diagram

After this analysis, we plot a heatmap to get a coloured representation of the data and to study the correlation between out predicting variables and the class variable. This heatmap is shown below:

The dataset is now formatted and processed. The time and amount column are standardized, and the Class column is removed to ensure fairness of evaluation. The data is processed by aset of algorithms from modules .

The following module diagram explains how these algorithms work together: This data is fit into a model and the following outlier detection.

modules are applied on it:

These algorithms are a part of sklearn. The ensemble module in the sklearn package includes ensemble-based methods and functions for the classification, regression and outlier detection. This free and open-source Python library is built using NumPy, SciPy and matplotlib modules which provides a lot of simple and efficient tools which can be used for data analysis and machine learning. It features various classification, clustering and regression algorithms and is designed to interoperate with the numerical and scientific libraries.

We've used Jupyter Notebook platform to make a program in Python to demonstrate the approach that this paper suggests. This program can also be executed on the cloud using Google Collab platform which supports all python notebook files.

- The aim of this project is to predict whether a credit card transaction is fraudulent or not, based on the transaction amount, time and other transaction related data.
- It aims to track down credit card transaction data, which is done by detecting anomalies in the transaction data.

Objective is to predict whether the instance of a credit card transaction is fraudulent or valid Credit card fraud detection is typically implemented using an algorithm that detects any anomalies in the transaction data and notifies the cardholder (as a precautionary measure) and the bank about any suspicious transaction.

To avoid misuse of data, the dataset has been masked. Hence we are unable to explain columns V1 to V28. All the columns between V1 to V28 are used as independent variable The other two independent columns are Amount and Time.

- Time indicates the time elapsed when the transaction was captured.
- Amount indicates the amount transacted.

Target column is named as Class Number of categories in Class column is 2 (0 & 1)

- "0" indicated as valid.

- "1" indicated as fraud.

CHAPTER-2

TOOLS AND TECHNIQUES

2.1 PLATFORM USED:

Python is used by Intel, IBM, NASA, Pixar, Netflix, Facebook, JP Morgan Chase, Spotify, and a number of other massive companies. It's one of the four main languages at Google, while Google's YouTube is largely written in Python. Same with Reddit, Pinterest, and Instagram.

2.2 HARDWARE USED:

Desktop and server hardware requires gigahertz processors, gigabytes of RAM, and terabytes of storage. They also need fully-fledged operating systems, device drivers, and true multitasking. In the microcontroller world, however, Micro Python is the operating system.

2.3 SOFTWARE USED:

Anaconda Navigator is a desktop graphical user interface (GUI) included in Anaconda® Distribution that allows you to launch applications and manage conda packages, environments, and channels without using command line interface (CLI) commands. Navigator can search for packages on Anaconda.org or in a local Anaconda Repository. It is available for Windows, macOS, and Linux.

CHAPTER-3

PROJECT OVERVIEW

3.1 PROJECT OVERVIEW

Multiple Supervised and Semi-Supervised machine learning techniques are used for fraud detection [8], but we aim is to overcome three main challenges with card frauds related dataset i.e., strong class imbalance, the inclusion of labelled and unlabelled samples, and to increase the ability to process a large number of transactions. Different Supervised machine learning algorithms [3] like Decision Trees, Naive Bayes Classification, Least Squares Regression, Logistic Regression and SVM are used to detect fraudulent transactions in real-time datasets. Two methods under random forests [6] are used to train the behavioural features of normal and abnormal transactions. They are Random-tree-based random forest and CART-based. Even though random forest obtains good results on small set data, there are still some problems in case of imbalanced data. The future work will focus on solving the above-mentioned problem. The algorithm of the random forest itself should be improved. Performance of Logistic Regression, K-Nearest Neighbour, and Naïve Bayes are analysed on highly skewed credit card fraud data where Research is carried out on examining meta-classifiers and meta-learning approaches in handling highly imbalanced credit card fraud data. Through supervised learning methods can be used there may fail at certain cases of detecting the fraud cases. A model of deep Auto-encoder and restricted Boltzmann machine (RBM) [2] that can construct normal transactions to find anomalies from normal patterns. Not only that a hybrid method is developed with a combination of Adaboost and Majority Voting methods [4]

8.2. Confusion Matrix

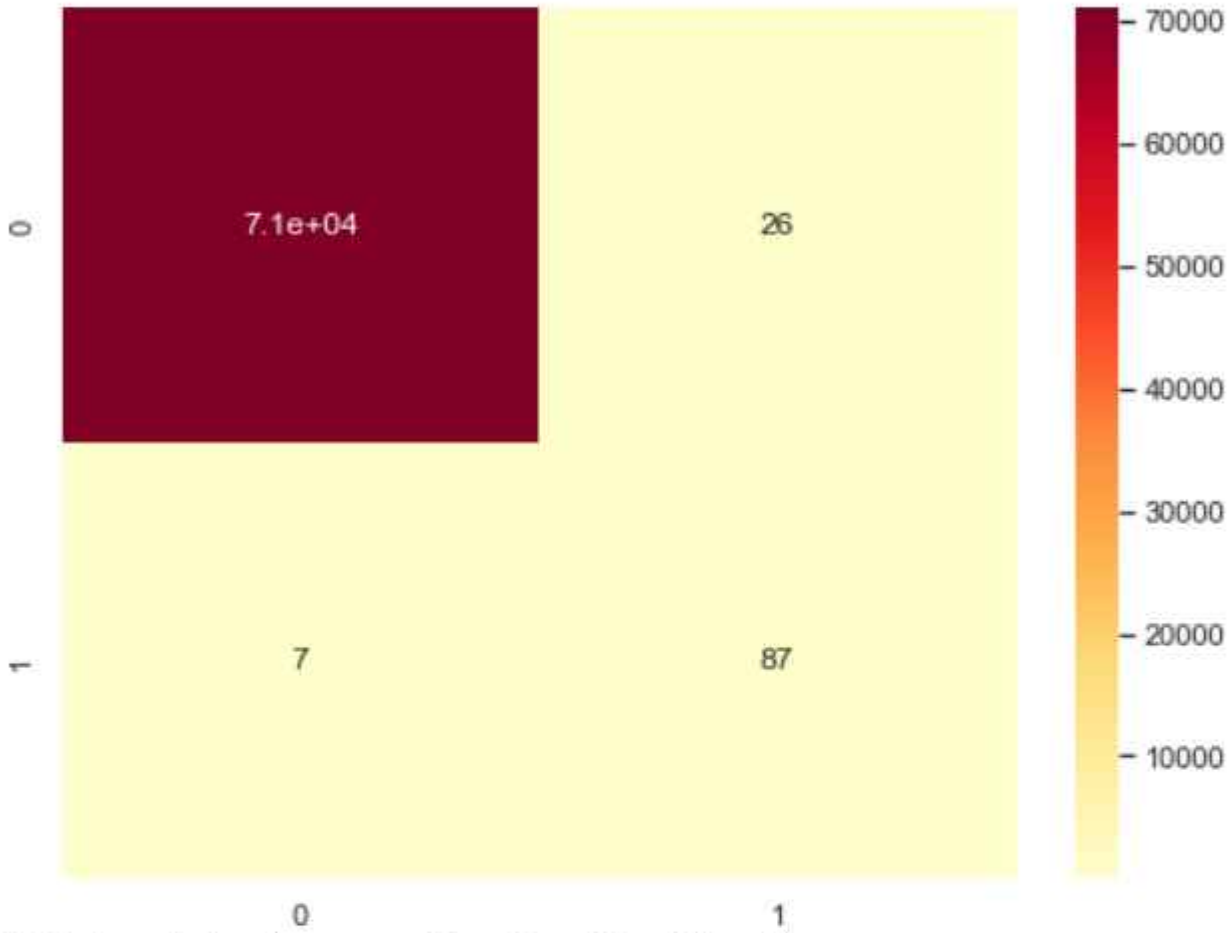

- A confusion matrix is a performance measurement technique for Machine learning classification. It is a kind of table which helps you to the know the performance of the classification model on a set of test data for that the true values are known. The term confusion matrix itself is very simple, but its related terminology can be a little confusing. Here, some simple explanation is given for this technique.

The confusion matrix shows the ways in which your classification model is confused when it makes predictions.

from sklearn.metrics import confusion_matrix cm=confusion_matrix(y_pred,y_test)
cm
```

array([[71082,    26], [    7,    87]], dtype=int64)
```

```
sns.set(rc={'figure.figsize':(8,6)})
sns.heatmap(cm,annot=True,cmap='YlOrRd')
```

8.3 Determining Accuracy, Recall and Precision Score

Accuracy = (71082+87)/(71082+26+7+87)
print('Accuracy Score by formula is:',Accuracy)
```

Accuracy Score by formula is: 0.9995365298727564

from sklearn.metrics import accuracy_score acc_score=accuracy_score(y_test,y_pred)
print(f'Accuracy of the Model: {(acc_score*100)//1} %')

Accuracy of the Model: 99.0 %

The model has to be tuned by adding much better independent variables

#1. Recall Score by formula for 0 is : (TP/(TP+FN)):

print('Recall Score by formula for 0 is:',(71082/(71086+26)))

#2. Recall Score by formula for 1 is : (TP/(TP+FN)):

print('Recall Score by formula for 1 is:',(87/(87+7)))

CHAPTER-5

CONCLUSION

5.1 CONCLUSION

In this report we tried different Machine Learning algorithms to detect fraudulent credit-cardtransactions.

From all the results, we finally conclude that Decision Tree Classifier gives the best accuracy and F1-score amongst the 4 models used. While, SVM also shows good results to train and test.

We saw all the models are highly accurate, but one of the reason for this is that the number of valid transactions far outnumbered than fraudulent ones ($\approx 300,000 : 500$). But since we have used a real data-set, the models have worked very well. Also, our data being imbalanced we showed that our model does not over-fits or under-fits the data and so we can say that we can use the data for real-life applications.
