8. OPERATION:

8.1 Operational planning and control

8.1.1 General

MITs plans, implements, and controls the processes (see 4.4) needed to meet requirements for the provision of educational products and services, and to implement the actions determined in 6.1, by:

 - 2) to demonstrate the conformity of educational products and services to their requirements.

The output of this planning is suitable for MITs's operations.

MITs controls planned changes and reviews the consequences of unintended changes, taking action to mitigate any adverse effects, as necessary. MITs ensures that outsourced processes are controlled

8.1.2 Specific operational planning and control of educational products and services: MITs

plans the design, development and expected outcomes of the educational products and services, including:

Interested parties

“Interested parties” are those stakeholders who receive our Educational Products or Services Processes., who may be impacted by them, or those parties who may otherwise have a significant interest in our organization. This includes both internal and external parties.

The identification of an interested party does not necessarily bring that party into the scope of the EOMS.

Properly planning a change by applying risk-based thinking can help to avoid negative consequences such as rework or cancellation or postponement of service; it can also result in positive consequences such as reduction of nonconforming outputs; or reduced incidents of human error.

MITS has determined interested parties and their needs that are relevant to the EOMS. These are :

Interested parties	Needs and expectation of interested parties
LEARNERS <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Students • Apprentices 	Quality and delivery performance of products and services
STAFF <ul style="list-style-type: none"> • Teaching • Non-teaching staff 	Job security, Recognition, Rewards and Training
Owners/shareholders	Profitability and growth
Suppliers	Beneficial Relationship and forecast
Other Beneficiaries (Legal)	Compliance

MITS monitor and review information about these interested parties and their relevant requirements.

Issues of Concern

For each interested party, the related issues of concern shall be identified and documented. These issues may reflect direct concerns of the party or there may be indirect concerns. Such concerns may impact on the interested party, or may be derived from the party that impact on the organization.

Issues may be either internal or external, depending on whether the interested party is internal or external. In addition, a certain type of party may have both internal and external concerns.

When attempting to identify internal concerns, it may be useful to consider service concerns, employee concerns, etc.

When attempting to identify external concerns, it may be useful to consider concerns arising from competition, society and culture, labour relations, statutory and regulatory issues, economic issues, etc.

Risk and Opportunity

Management will then identify risks and opportunities related to the issues of concern. Management will then determine a treatment method for each risk or opportunity. Risks are managed to reduce their likelihood and severity, while opportunities are managed to increase their likelihood and benefits. Blended issues may require more complex treatment.
