A Report on Two-day Workshop on "Financial Education for Young Citizens" Organized by School of Management from 16.10.2025 to 17.10.2025

Report Submitted by: Dr. E.Gnanaprasuna, Assistant Professor, School of Management.

Resource Person Details: Dr. B. Nagarjuna, Securities Market Trainer.

Time: 10.00 am to 5.00 noon Venue: Seminar Hall B Total No. of Participants: 122 Mode of Conduct: Offline Report Received on 31.10. 2025

Objective of the Workshop:

The two-day workshop aimed to promote financial literacy among young citizens, especially MBA students, by creating awareness on financial planning, investment options, and career prospects in the financial sector. The sessions were designed to build foundational knowledge of financial markets and inspire students to make informed financial and career decisions.

Day 1: Understanding Financial Concepts and Market Fundamentals

The first day began with a formal inaugural session followed by an engaging talk by Dr. B. Nagarjuna. He emphasized the importance of financial education in today's competitive economy.

Key topics covered included:

- Inflation: Its causes, impact on purchasing power, and relevance to investment decisions.
- Equity Market: Overview of stock exchanges, trading mechanisms, and long-term wealth creation through equity investments
- Bond Market: Introduction to various types of bonds and their suitability for risk-averse investors.

Participants gained clarity on how these financial instruments contribute to personal and national economic growth.

Day 2: Investment Avenues, Digital Finance, and Career Opportunities

The second day focused on practical financial instruments and career prospects in finance. Dr. Nagarjuna elaborated on:

- Sovereign Gold Bonds (SGBs): Benefits, safety, and government support.
- Demat Accounts: Process of opening and managing accounts, and their role in facilitating online investments.
- Importance of Early Investment: Building long-term wealth through disciplined financial planning.

In addition, the session highlighted career opportunities for MBA students in domains such as:

- Equity Research and Financial Analysis
- Investment Banking and Portfolio Management
- Stock Broking and Wealth Management
- Financial Consulting and Risk Management
- Government and Regulatory Bodies (RBI, SEBI, NABARD, etc.)

The resource person motivated students to explore careers in the financial services sector, emphasizing the growing need for skilled finance professionals with analytical and ethical decision-making abilities.

Learning Outcomes:

After completing the two-day workshop, students were able to:

- 1. Explain the concepts of inflation, equity, and bond markets and their role in the economy.
- 2. Differentiate between various investment avenues such as stocks, bonds, and Sovereign Gold Bonds.
- 3. Demonstrate basic knowledge of how to open and operate a Demat account.
- 4. Evaluate the importance of early investment and financial planning for long-term stability.
- 5. Identify potential career paths in finance and investment sectors relevant to MBA graduates.
- 6. Develop an informed and responsible approach toward financial decision-making.

Conclusion

The workshop on "Financial Education for Young Citizens" was highly beneficial in bridging the gap between theoretical learning and practical financial awareness. It empowered MBA students to become financially literate and career-ready professionals.

The School of Management expresses heartfelt thanks to Dr. B. Nagarjuna for delivering such valuable sessions and to the faculty and students for their active participation, ensuring the workshop's success.
